The reason why you can Keep a Rabbit as an Emotional Support Animal

I have seen people asking one question: can we keep a rabbit as an emotional support animal?

And the answer is very simple that yes, you can keep the rabbit as an ESA and this answer has multiple reasons that rabbits can prove very effective emotional support animals. For your clarity, I will further outline the reasons for rabbits as ESA. An esa letter online can be at your rescue here.

So, be ready because I am going to tell you very interesting and unknown facts about the Rabbits as ESA.

1. Their loveable and interesting personality

Things become more cheerful and happy when you see something cute and adorable. It is like you are doing some shopping and your eyes are stuck on something beautiful.

Yes, the same goes with the rabbits too because they are like the ball of white fur with cute little eyes and nose while their body is also tiny with floppy ears. Even the description of the rabbit makes you crave for it and when you feel it in your lap, your mood automatically lightens up.

Due to the cheerfulness they carry with them, they can act as a source of pleasure for their owners and you should get an emotional support animal letter for them. You have to take care of them and they will give you love and care in return.

2. They are very Quiet

What if you are going through a mental breakdown and you get some noisy animal as your pet?

Of course, your headache will increase but what if you have a very quiet animal on your side? you are going to love it.

So, rabbits are the kind of animal you need in the days of your mental illness because they are very quiet and peaceful as they can stand beside you and you will not even feel their presence. They will give you company but at the same time, you will not feel a voice or irritating noise. As compared to the ESA dog, rabbits are very preferable if you are peace-loving and you do not want to worry about the noise. So, do not shy away if you want to have a cute bunny as an ESA. So, you have to find a permanent solution for this issue and the solution is an esa letter for housing.

3. Do not take much Space

If you are living in a small apartment and you do not have a place for a big animal, then do not worry because Rabbits can be your support here too.

Dogs take a lot of space or you have to keep them in a yard when they are from some big breed and so, most of the people do not keep dogs as ESA. But for rabbits, the case is totally opposite because they need a very small space and they can even live in a small box. You just need to set a litter in their living box.

So, rabbits are relatively easy to keep.

4. They have Long Lives

You can keep a pet but are you worried about losing them early because of a short life span?

If yes, then do not worry because rabbits have a relatively long life span of more than 10 years and it means that you do not need to worry about losing your favorite pet after a few years.

Be ready for the long-term commitment with the rabbit as your ESA and enjoy your time with them.

5. Can be Easily Trained

Do not worry about training your rabbit because they are relatively very easy to get used to the new routine. Unlike dogs, as they require more attention and patience on the part of the owner, you can easily keep rabbits as ESA and get esa letter for housing for them because, for training, you just need to keep them with you 24/7. However, it does not mean that you would be careless towards their training as it can turn out to be a problem for you.

6. Does not Cost A lot

Most of the pets are not kept by the owners because of their expenses and cost and if you are one of the people then, I have good news for you.

Rabbits are the most inexpensive animal that can be your emotional support because first, they do not ask for extra space and their food expenses are also very limited.

So, be ready as Rabbits can prove a very financially friendly animal for you.

I hope the points that I have mentioned above are the answer to your questions that “Can I keep a rabbit as ESA?”. You are the person who knows its emotional instability and the things that can soothe you so, if you think a rabbit can be of some help then, do not hesitate and go for it.

I hope Rabbit will prove to be a good and effective ESA for you.
