Choosing the best clipper for your dog is the first step of grooming because your dog's fur is the most fragile thing and in order to prevent it from damage, you need a clipper. Always choose a clipper that has a low voice because dogs are irritated by the noise of the clipper and they can create fuss during your grooming phase.

So, select a clipper carefully folks.

Do not go too deep with the Clippers because in this way you can damage the skin of your dog and it can get infected too. So, always try to use the clipper from a distance and clean it with the help of the sanitizer, Dettol, or any other bacteria-killing lubricant. Trim and Comb hair Regularly if your dog has a growing coat because their hair can grow large in a few days and if you will not comb it then, that fur will be found on your carpet and bed.

Yes, carpet and bed and I bet, you must have heard it from your mother too. They do not like pets.

Now here, you have to remember that if your dog feels more heat or temperature then, you have to turn and brush their coat regularly but if your dog feels colder, then a long coat can be of huge favor to them. Giving Periodic showers to the dog presents their skin and does not cause damage to the neutralized nature of the acid to protect cover.

Yes, you heard it right; dogs do have an acidic protective cover on their skin. This skin can be damaged by the regular wash-ups, so you have to decide which dog needs the regular baths and which one needs fewer baths. It can be complicated for you because you have to think a lot about your pet before adopting it but, once you have a dog, your life can go easy on you.

Do not use your products on dogs and the main reason behind it is that dog's skin and hair are different from humans and they have a natural layer of acids. With the normal shampoo, their skins can lose the acids and their hair gets more dry than usual. So, try to always use the dog-specific shampoo which can nourish the skin of your ESA dog and smoothen their hair. For this purpose, you can check any brand for animal products and support your dog's health and beauty.

These tips may seem very basic and simple to you but trust me, these are the most effective points when it comes to grooming your dog.
